PETRO DIAMOND: SPECIALISTS IN ENERGY DERIVATIVES

Petro-Diamond Risk Management Ltd ('Petro Diamond') is a London-based energy derivatives specialist.

As experts in energy products, we can deal in any tradable energy commodity. This includes any number of classifications of crude oil, light products, middle distillates, heavy fuel oil, coal and natural gas, or indeed combinations of them. Whether dealing in Kerosene for a customer in Singapore, Naphtha for a customer in Japan, or Brent Crude for a European customer, Petro Diamond has a unique understanding of the energy market.

Petro-Diamond Risk Management Ltd is a wholly owned subsidiary of Mitsubishi Corporation, which has been successfully expanding its commodity derivatives business for years. Because of this, we believe we enjoy the best of both worlds. We have the support of a large multinational company but we have retained the warmth and approach of a specialist operation. Our dealers and customers get to know each other well, and we like to think that we work as an extension of our customers' business, helping them develop the hedging strategies they need to run their businesses successfully.

A TRUSTED PARTNER IN RISK MANAGEMENT

Our customers range from producers, refiners and storage facilities to consumers and financial institutions. All have very different needs and require a different approach to managing the risks of trading in the energy market. That's why we have a flexible approach and aren't afraid to create bespoke solutions to unique situations. From straightforward hedging to more complex exotics and hybrid, structured products, our team has a wealth of experience in coming up with the right solution.

As well as structuring deals for our customers, we also supply market knowledge and information through our market reports, giving our customers access to our first-hand experience.

We are also proud of the service we provide behind the scenes. We offer credit lines (subject to approval) and our dedicated back office team is available to deal with any customer questions.

Petro Diamond is unlike any other energy trading company. Our strength lies in the relationships we have forged with our customers. We give every customer individual attention to find the solutions that suit them best. We believe that's what makes us a trusted partner; and the best relationships are always founded on trust.
